Question 1

Refer to Fig. 1, a news article about Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Tourists usually avoid Rio de Janeiro's poor areas (shanty towns) but now city officials are inviting tourists to visit. Santa Marta became the first community in a programme meant to promote tourism in poor neighbourhoods that are home to unique music and artwork.

The programme, 'Rio Top Tour: Rio de Janeiro in a Different Perspective', also rewards communities like Santa Marta that have been cleared of the violent gangs that have made Rio's crowded hillsides dangerous.

Santa Marta residents will be trained to work as tourist guides, and street signs in English will be posted throughout the shanty town of some 5000 people. It will have about 30 attractions such as the place where Michael Jackson filmed a video, a samba school and works of local artists, as well as a view point over the city.

'Rio won't be known only for the Christ the Redeemer statue, the Sugar Loaf Mountain or the Copacabana and Ipanema beaches,' Brazil's Tourism Minister, Luiz Barreto, said.

The programme has been created by federal and state authorities and includes a marketing campaign and information booths posted in more traditional tourist spots.

President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva visited Santa Marta to launch the programme officially, and said he intends to spread the programme to other poor communities in Rio and across Brazil.

Question 4

Refer to Fig. 3, a news item about cruise ships in Dubai.

More cruise lines placing ships in Dubai

Cruise travel is the fastest growing segment of tourism in Dubai. For example, Costa Cruises named its newest ship (the 2286-passenger Costa Deliziosa) in Dubai during 2010. This was the first time that a cruise ship was named in a Middle Eastern country. Even the ruler of Dubai, Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum, was present to welcome Costa's newest ship.

In 2006 Costa Cruises was the first cruise line to base a ship in the region because it clearly saw the value of Dubai as a cruise destination. Costa Cruises now has three vessels based in Dubai for the winter season. As there is growth in the region, other cruise lines like Aida Cruises and Royal Caribbean International have also chosen to base ships there.

A typical 7-night Costa Dubai cruise visits Oman, Bahrain, Abu Dhabi, and also includes two nights in Dubai.
