Adapted from Ken Browne An Introduction to Sociology (1992).

- (a) From the evidence in Source A, identify the research method being used. [2]
- (b) Identify two methods that could be used to find out about people's media use, apart from the one in Source A. [2]
- (c) Using examples from Source A, describe two reasons why the data collected might not be valid. [4]
- (d) Describe two limitations of using open questions in sociological research. [4]
- (e) Describe two strengths and two limitations of using secondary data in sociological research. [8]
- (f) Explain why unstructured interviews are thought to be more valid than other forms of interview. [10]
- (g) To what extent are positivists correct in stating that 'sociology is a science'? [15]

Answer either Question 2 or Question 3.

Section B: Culture, identity and socialisation

- 2 The various methods used to persuade or force individuals to conform to society's norms and values are known as social control. Social control is one way in which deviance can be avoided and social conformity maintained.
- (a) What is meant by the term 'social conformity'? [2]
 - (b) Describe two agencies of social control. [4]
 - (c) Explain how informal agencies of social control use rewards and sanctions to ensure conformity. [6]
 - (d) Explain why norms and values vary widely from one country to another. [8]
 - (e) To what extent is role conflict more of a problem in modern industrial societies than in the past? [15]

Section C: Social inequality

- 3 Some sociologists have suggested that social class is the most important influence on an individual's life chances. It is believed that other social characteristics are less important than social class. For example, these sociologists would argue a person from Bangladesh working in a manual job in the UK suffers inequality because they are working class not because of their ethnicity.
- (a) What is meant by the term 'working class'? [2]
 - (b) Describe two social classes, other than 'working class'. [4]
 - (c) Explain how the working class has changed in modern industrial societies. [6]
 - (d) Explain why Marxists believe social class is the most important social characteristic in determining life chances. [8]
 - (e) To what extent is ethnicity the most important cause of inequality in modern industrial societies? [15]
