Answer Question 1

1 Source A

Some sociologists prefer to look at society as a whole and take a macro approach while others prefer a micro approach where they can record the thoughts and feelings of individuals.

Taking a micro approach, a researcher began to investigate why young people smoke. After discovering a younger relative had become a smoker, the researcher was interested to learn why young people start to smoke and how it affects their identity. The researcher's first task was to gain access to a sample.

Finding a sample is not always easy if there is not a sampling frame. As young people are unlikely to want to speak to a professional researcher with very different social characteristics, a snowball sample was used. Once a sample was gained an overt participant observation was conducted.

- (a) From Source A identify two approaches used by sociologists. [2]
- (b) Identify two types of historical document. [2]
- (c) Using information from Source A, describe two reasons why the researcher chose to use snowball sampling. [4]
- (d) Describe two strengths of using focus groups in sociological research. [4]
- (e) Describe two strengths and two limitations of using field experiments in sociological research. [8]
- (f) Explain why longitudinal studies can be useful for sociological research. [10]
- (g) To what extent are official statistics useful for sociological research? [15]

Answer either Question 2 or Question 3

Section B: Culture, identity and socialisation

- 2 Children and young people have to learn how to behave in society. Negative sanctions are often used to teach children right from wrong and help to create value consensus in society. Sanctions have an important influence on lifestyles. However, societies are becoming more culturally diverse and definitions of masculinity and femininity continue to change.
- (a) What is meant by the term 'masculinity'? [2]
- (b) Describe two sanctions used to control young people. [4]
- (c) Explain how societies are culturally diverse. [6]
- (d) Explain why traditional femininity is changing. [8]
- (e) To what extent does value consensus exist in modern industrial societies? [15]

Section C: Social inequality

- 3 Some sociologists claim that the poor are caught in a poverty trap. Other sociologists argue that intergenerational social mobility is possible. Many governments try to help people in poverty by redistributing wealth. However, even with policies to make society more equal, some people still experience discrimination in the workplace, such as institutional racism.
- (a) What is meant by the term 'intergenerational social mobility'? [2]
- (b) Describe two examples of vertical segregation in the workplace. [4]
- (c) Explain how institutional racism affects individuals. [6]
- (d) Explain why governments choose to redistribute wealth. [8]
- (e) To what extent is it possible to escape the poverty trap? [15]
