General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Paper 1
Section A Reading
AO2

All students should be required to demonstrate an ability to:

- (i) read and understand texts with insight and engagement
- (ii) develop and sustain interpretations of writer's ideas and perspectives
- (iii) understand and make some evaluation of how writers use linguistic and structural devices to achieve their effects

2	Examiners should reward the identification of phrases that show an understanding of why his wife was upset and frightened. Examiners should give one mark for each reason given: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• their departure had been rushed</li> <li>• they had not had time to take part in the customary good luck farewell</li> <li>• she is worried that she might be touching him for the very last time</li> <li>• she is worried that he is going outside Moscow and she believes he may be in danger</li> <li>• she believes that anywhere outside Moscow is a wild place</li> <li>• she believes that the land beyond Moscow is peopled by drunks and thugs</li> <li>• she is frightened because her husband is an American, who might be exploited because of his nationality.</li> <li>• she distrusted everything Russian.</li> </ul>	2

3	Examiners should reward the identification and explanation of the character of the taxi driver and should look to reward the quality of explanation rather than simply counting the number of features that have been identified. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• he lacks sophistication - the writer says he has a "peasant frankness"</li> <li>• he is used to hard work, as his hands are scarred</li> <li>• the writer's first impression is not positive, believing that he looks like a criminal and is therefore suspicious or dangerous</li> <li>• some may see the driver as accommodating – it is three hundred miles and the roads are in a poor condition, yet the taxi driver agrees to take him</li> <li>• some may see him as hardworking, accepting a lucrative fare</li> <li>• the writer later sees him as honest and friendly – he introduces himself by name to the writer</li> <li>• he seems to take a curious pride in the dangerous wilderness of Siberia</li> <li>• he sounds contented and has found his place to live in the peacefulness of Siberia</li> <li>• he is a practical, physical man – he "wrestles" with the steering wheel and with the spare tyre</li> <li>• he is knowledgeable about the dangers of Siberia and is brave to take them on</li> <li>• he shows a caring side to his character, protecting the writer from inadvertently coming to harm in the woods.</li> </ul>	5

4	Examiners should refer to the following bullet points and then to the table to reach an overall judgement. There are many features in the passage that are worthy of comment. Examiners must reward all valid points that show an engagement with the text and an appreciation of the writer's technique rather than have a set agenda of items that they are looking for. Examiners must reward all valid points that address the question and show a clear grasp of the writer's technique. Candidates may refer to some of the following points: His experiences in Moscow: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• from the very start of the passage Moscow is presented as causing "distress"</li></ul>	12

- it is unpleasantly “hot and humid”
- the airport is physically and emotionally uncomfortable for the writer
- other passengers are presented as grotesques, “red-faced”, who seem to lack proper luggage – they have “chequered vinyl sacks” which sound cheap and inappropriate
- they show no regard for him and push past him
- like the people, the airport is also uncared for – the flooring is “dusty”
- his experiences with his wife create an atmosphere of distress and painful separation
- the scale of Tatyana’s fears seem exaggerated or heightened: “she felt she might be touching me for the last time”
- the Russian convention of not making positive predictions before any activity leaves the Moscow section with an atmosphere of latent disaster or imminent problems
- her desperation is such that he has to pull away from her physically
- there is an irony here in that it is the security guard who causes the most alarm to both the writer and his wife
- the accusations of being a spy depict Moscow as a place that is naturally suspicious and unfriendly, especially to foreigners
- his journey to the plane shows that the runways are as poorly maintained as the airport, which cements our impressions of Moscow as a place that is uncared for and which itself shows no consideration or care to anyone there.

His experiences in Siberia:

- our first impressions of Siberia from the plane are ones of immense scale and deep forests – it “swept” all the way to the horizon
- the manner in which it is described emphasises its lush fertility
- on arrival, our first impressions of the airport are similar to those of Moscow – unpleasantly hot and generally uncared for – the “derelict” luggage conveyor
- the taxi driver is in many ways an embodiment of Siberia – physically tough
- the conditions are harsh, with the road being difficult to traverse and even described as “violent”
- the landscape is described in detail and manifests striking beauty, with its glittering sky and rushing streams; yet it is also imposing, even regal in its beauty
- the forest is “scraggly” and creates an atmosphere of potential threat: “looming”

- the story of the woman torn apart by wolves convinces the reader that this is a dangerously primal place, and that the road they are travelling on is a place of life and death
- the taxi driver persuades us that Siberia has a deceptively beguiling quality
- the depiction of the trees and insect life presents Siberia as lush and fecund
- the insects are presented as predatory and also can cause fatal diseases.

Particular words, phrases and techniques:

- complex sentence used at the beginning of the passage to quickly establish a strong sense of place
- short sentences used for dialogue for simplicity, "Look at this mud!"
- use of juxtaposition in the first paragraph, of the cramped, disgusting and rank interior of the plane with the peaceful and natural expanse of Siberia
- the writer makes use of a relatively complex structure beginning in the present, flashing back to Moscow and the airport before it comes into the present with the landing in Siberia
- use of exaggeration to depict the scale of Tatyana's worries – the whole of Russia outside Moscow is described as "semi-barbarous"
- short sentence used to move the passage forward, "They called my flight"
- use of questions depicts the guard's level of suspicion
- use of alliteration for dramatic emphasis to mark his departure – "Finally free" and "rattling ride"
- use of metaphor, "swords of sunlight"
- use of simile, "birch trees, leaves so green they seemed to glow, and trunks gleaming white as if freshly painted"
- extensive use of exclamation marks to mark the style of the taxi driver's speech and to heighten the experience of Siberia, "Hey, get away from the woods!" Volodya shouted. "You can get a disease from the grass and catch encephalitis!", "Siberia!"
- use of dashes for parenthetical insertion, "silver-grey rivers – Siberia – swept".

6	Markers should use the grid below to award marks for this writing activity. The assessment of writing involves a judgement about a writer's ability to construct and convey meaning in written language, matching style to audience and purpose. Writing is marked against three skills areas which assess the Writing Assessment Objectives. Markers should allocate about a third of the total marks for accuracy in spelling, punctuation and grammar. The best-fit approach An answer may not always satisfy every one of the assessment criteria for a particular band in order to receive a mark within that band range, since on individual criteria the answer may meet the descriptor for a higher or lower mark range. The best-fit approach should be used to determine the mark which corresponds most closely to the overall quality of the response.	10
